

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

*Wake from your sleep, sweet Christians, now, and listen :
A little song
We have, so sweet it like a star doth glisten,
And dance along.*

*Now wake and hark : all brightly it is glowing
With yule-flames merry,
And o'er it many a holly sprig is growing,
And scarlet berry.*

*A bough of evergreen, with wax-lights gleaming,
It bravely graces ;
And o'er its lines the star that's eastward beaming
Leaves golden traces.*

*Also, our little song, it sweetly praiseth,
Like birds in flocks
When morning from her bed of roses raiseth
Her golden locks.*

*But this it is that makes most sweet our story,
When all is said :
It holds a little Child, with rays of glory
Around His head.*

CHRISTMAS CAROL

By Christina G. Rossetti

A HOLY, heavenly chime
Rings fulness in of time,
And on His Mother's breast
Our Lord God ever-Blest
Is laid a Babe at rest.

Stoop, Spirits unused to stoop,
Swoop angels, flying swoop,
Adoring as you gaze,
Uplifting hymns of praise :—
"Grace to the Full of Grace!"

A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

The cave is cold and strait
To hold the angelic state :
More strait it is, more cold,
To foster and infold
Its maker one hour old.

Thrilled through with awestruck love,
Meek Angels poised above,
Beholding God, look down :

“What, is there never a Crown
For Him in swaddled gown?

“How comes he soft and weak
With such a tender cheek,
With such a soft small hand? —
The very Hand which spann’d
Heaven when its girth was plann’d.

“How comes he with a voice
Which is but baby-noise? —
That Voice which spake with might — ‘Let there be light’ — and light
Sprang out before our sight.

“What need hath he of flesh
Made flawless now afresh?
What need of human heart? —
Heart that must bleed and smart
Choosing the better part.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

"But see : His gracious smile
Dismisses us a while
To serve ~~Him~~ in His kin.
Haste we, make haste, begin
To fetch His brethren in."

Like stars they flash and shoot,
The Shepherds they salute :
"Glory to God " they sing :
"Good news of peace we bring,
For Christ is born a king."

"MOTHER. O MAKE ME A PAIR OF WINGS!"

WINGS.

(In Memoriam: M. O. Christmas, 1880.)

BY THE AUTHOR OF "JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN."

MOTHER, O make me a pair of wings,
Like the Christ-child's adorning;
e as the sky, with a gold-star eye —
'll wear them on Christmas morning."

The mother worked with a careless heart,
All through that merry morning:
Happy and blind, nor saw behind
The shadow that gives no warning.

WINGS.

7

He struck — and over the little face

A sudden change came creeping :

Twelve struggling hours against Death's fierce powers,

And then — he has left her sleeping.

Strange sleep which no mother's kiss can wake !

Lay her pretty wings beside her :

Strew white flowers sweet on her hands and feet,

And under the white snow hide her.

For the Christ-child called her out of her play,

And, thus our earth-life scorning,

She went away. — What, dead, we say ?

She was born that Christmas morning

THE CHRIST-CHILD AND THE CHILDREN.

BY MRS. A. D. T. WHITNEY.

MARY lay meek and mild,
Straw-pillowed among the gentle kine ;
Mary of David's anointed line,
And beside her the little Child.

Strangers were seeking her :
Stately strangers before the gate :
Leaving their laden camels to wait
With gold, and incense, and myrrh.

Wise men, and sceptred kings,
Come to the Baby from afar
By beautiful beckon of a star,
Bringing Him precious things.

The sweet girl-mother smiled,
With strange delight that was half a dread,
As they laid them down beside her bed —
Gifts for the little child.

Did the daughter of Israel know,
As she put them into his helpless hands,
How for little and poor in all the lands
Jesus received them so ?

Or thought she as she smiled,
How always upon that blessed morn
When her Baby in Bethlehem was born,
The Child should bring to the child

His joy in homes to be ;
Dividing the gifts of his manger-bed,
As he once divided the loaves of bread
To the people by the sea ?

Ah, gladness of Christmas Day !
From the bitter and costly offered then,
And taken for sakes of the sons of men,
It has come down all the way.

THE SILENT CHILDREN.

BY ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS.

THE light was low in the school-room ;
The day before Christmas day
Had ended. It was darkening in the garden
Where the Silent Children play.

Throughout that House of Pity,
The soundless lessons said,
The noiseless sport suspended,
The voiceless tasks all read,

The little deaf-mute children,
As still as still could be,
Gathered about the master,
Sensitive, swift to see,

With their fine attentive fingers
And their wonderful, watchful eyes —
What dumb joy he would bring them
For the Christmas eve's surprise !

The lights blazed out in the school-room ;
The play-ground went dark as death ;
The master moved in a halo ;
The children held their breath :

“ I show you now a wonder —
The audiphone,” he said.
He spoke in their silent language,
Like the language of the dead.

And answering spake the children,
As the dead might answer too :
“ But what for us, O master ?
This may be good for you ;

“ But how is our Christmas coming
Out of a wise machine ?
For not like other children's Have our happy hours been ;

"And the children of the "Gentle and the meek"
 "And the lowly of heart"
 "And the pure in heart"

"And the meek and lowly"
 "And the pure in heart"
 "And the meek and lowly"
 "And the pure in heart"

"THE SUNDAY SCHOOL, THE SUNDAY SCHOOL, THE SUNDAY SCHOOL"

"O my children, for a little,
 As those who suffer must,
 Great is to bear denial,
 But grand it is to trust."

"With Jesus, from the dawn
 Of this new world, to this,
 Give us, O Father, thy Thy will be done, thy"

Quick signalled then the master :
Sweet sang the hidden choir —
Their voices, wild and piercing,
Broke like a long desire

That to content has strengthened.
Glad the clear strains outrang :
“Nearer to Thee, oh, nearer !”
The pitying singers sang;

“Nearer to Thee, oh, nearer,
Nearer, my God, to Thee !”
Awestruck, the silent children
Hear the great harmony.

Happy that Christmas evening:
Wise was the master's choice,
Who gave the deaf-mute children
The blessed human voice.

Wise was that other Master,
Tender His purpose dim,
Who gave His Son on Christmas,
To draw us “nearer Him.”

We are all but silent children,
Denied and deaf and dumb
Before His unknown science.—
Lord, if Thou wilt, we come !

THE SILENT CHILDREN.

"And not like other children's Can they now or ever be!"
But the master smiled through the halo:
"Just trust a mystery,

Then to the waiting marvel
The listening children leant:
Like listeners, the shadows
Across the school-room bent,

"I SHOW YOU NOW A WONDER, THE AUDIPHONE," HE SAID.

"O my children, for a little,
As those who suffer must!
Great 'tis to bear denial,
But grand it is to trust."

While Science, from her silence
Of twice three thousand years,
Gave her late salutation
To sealed human ears.

Quick signalled then the master :
Sweet sang the hidden choir —
Their voices, wild and piercing,
Broke like a long desire

That to content has strengthened.
Glad the clear strains outrang :
“Nearer to Thee, oh, nearer !”
The pitying singers sang,

“Nearer to Thee, oh, nearer,
Nearer, my God, to Thee !”
Awestruck, the silent children
Hear the great harmony.

Happy that Christmas evening:
Wise was the master's choice,
Who gave the deaf-mute children
The blessed human voice.

Wise was that other Master,
Tender His purpose dim,
Who gave His Son on Christmas,
To draw us “nearer Him.”

We are all but silent children,
Denied and deaf and dumb
Before His unknown science —
Lord, if Thou wilt, we come !

A DAY IN WINTER.

BY MRS. L. C. WHITON.

THROUGH the crimson fires of morning
Streaming upward in the East,
Leaps the sun, with sudden dawning,
Like a captive king released ;
And December skies reflected
In the azure hue below
Seem like summer recollected
In the dreaming of the snow. —
It is winter, little children, let the summer,
singing, go !

There are crisp winds gaily blowing
From the North and from the West ;
'Bove the river strongly flowing
Lies the river's frozen breast :
O'er its shining silence crashing
Skim the skaters to and fro ;
And the noonday splendors flashing
In the rainbow colors show. —
It is winter, little children, let the summer,
singing, go !

When the gorgeous day is dying,
There is swept a cloud of rose
O'er the hill-tops softly lying
In the flush of sweet repose ;
And the nests, all white with snowing,

In the twilight breezes blow ;
And the untired moon is showing
Her bare heart to the snow. —
It is winter, little children, let the summer,
singing, go !

"TWELVE O'CLOCK, AND ALL'S WELL!"

(A Christmas Rhyme of Might-Have-Been.)

By M. S. E. P.

I KNOW of an Owl,
A story-book Owl,
And he dwells in a Cloudland tree,
So way-high-up you never see
A glimpse of the great white fowl.

And this ancient fowl,
This story-book Owl,
Sometimes to himself he speaks —
Once in a thousand years or so —
In a voice that crackles and creaks
And never is heard by the children below:
"Tu-whit! tu-whoo!
I sleep by day,
Of course I do—
It's the sensible way."

For when little children lie fast asleep,
And darkness enshrouds the world so deep,

And weary eyes close to gaze only in dreams,
This story-book bird
With the big round eyes,
Whom nothing escapes,
So knowing and wise,
Watches and peers, with never a wink,
Into crannies and nooks where one might think
No danger would come, so peaceful it seems.

And prying about, this story-book bird
In the snowy thick
Of a Christmas eve —
If you will believe—
Just in the nick
Found the strangest thing that ever you heard:
Santa Klaus asleep,
All down in a heap,
On the floor of his sleigh
Ready packed for the way!

And think of the stockings swaying
At 'leven o' the night,
With the silent firelight
All over them fitfully playing—
A dangling host
From the chimney nails
As warm as toast—
But empty, pitiful,
They promise a million wails
From just one city-full!

“Tu-whit! to-whoo!
Here's a to-do!”
Said the sleepless bird,
The wise old owl,
The watchful fowl.
He flew and he whirled,
Soft Cloudland exploring,
Led up like an arrow
By the wildest of snoring,
Till he stopped,
Then dropped
On the edge of a cloud—
Oh, the snoring was loud!—
Then stalked to that sleigh.
Ah, what a fine dose!—

He flashed out one claw, and Tweaked Santa Klaus' nose.

Santa woke with a jump,
Sat up in his sleigh,
Rubbed his nose—
And I don't suppose
Understands to this day—
And gazing around he took in the plight,
He seized his reins in the funniest fright,
And down he came in the snowy midnight
All rosy and bright—
The great, merry elf,
Just like himself,

Bluster and noise, nonsense and fun,
With gifts for the children, everyone;
While, soft and far, every bell
Chimed “Twelve o' the clock and all's well!”
And the slumbering world might have heard
The great white wide-winged story-book bird
A-calling “Merry Christmas!” forth in glee
As he flew up to his Cloudland tree.

And the Owl never told—I alone knew—
So don't you tell, whatever you do,
How near the world came to a disaster most shocking,
Waking Christmas morning without a filled stocking!

BY PAUL H. HAYNE.

("Hie on the holly tree!" — Old Ballad.)

THE firelight danced and wavered
In elvish, twinkling glee
On the leaves and crimson berries
Of the great green Christmas-Tree;
And the children who gathered round it
Beheld, with marvelling eyes,
Pendant from trunk and branches
How many a precious prize,
From the shimmer of gold and silver
Through a purse's cunning net,

To the coils of a rippling necklace
That quivered with beads of jet!
But chiefly they gazed in wonder
Where flickered strangely through
The topmost leaves of the holly,
The sheen of a silken shoe!
And the eldest spake to her father:
"I have seen — yes, year by year,
On the crown of our Christmas hollies,
That small shoe glittering clear;

"But you never have told who owned it,
Nor why, so loftily set,
It shines though the fadeless verdure—
You never have told us yet!"

'Twas then that the museful father
In slow sad accents said,
While the firelight hovered eèrily
About his downcast head:

"My children . . . you had a sister;
(It was long, long, long ago,)
She came like an Eden rosebud
'Mid the dreariest winter snow,

"And for four sweet seasons blossomed
To cheer our hearts and hearth,
When the song of the Bethlehem angels
Lured her away from earth —

"A little before she left us,
We had deftly raised to view,
On the topmost branch of the holly,
Yon glimmering, tiny shoe ;

"For again 'twas the time of Christmas,
As she lay with laboring breath ;
But . . . our minds were blinded strangely,
And we did not dream of death.

"We knew that no toy would please her
Like a shoe, so fair and neat,
To fold, with its soft caressing,
Her delicate, sylph-like feet!

"Truly, a smile like a sunbeam
Brightened her eyes of blue,
And once . . twice . . thrice . . she tested
The charm of her fairy shoe !

"Ah ! then the bright smile flickered,
Faded, and drooped away,
As faintly, in tones that faltered,
I heard our darling say :

" ' My shoe ! papa, please hang it
Once more on the holly bough,
Just where I am sure to see it,
When I wake . . . an hour from now ! ' "

"But alas ! she never wakened !
Close-shut were the eyes of blue
Whose last faint gleam had fondled
The curves of that dainty shoe !

"Ah, children, you understand me—
Your eyes are brimmed with dew,
As they watch on the Christmas holly
The sheen of a silken shoe ! "

A TALE OF A COMET.

BY J. T. TROWBRIDGE.

WE had seen the streaming meteors' light,
With their trails of fire, the autumn night,

And talked of falling sky-rocks hurled
From some long-since exploded world ;
Of comets frisking among the stars
With tails like fiery trains of cars,
And asked, "Should the reckless engineer
Some rakish comet steer
Crashing into our atmosphere,
How would the planet's shell resist him?"
Then we conversed of the solar system,

And lunar men ;

And Doctor Ben

Brought out his globe, at half-past ten,
And lectured, giving conclusive reasons
For tides, eclipses, climes and seasons ;
Well, weary at last, I went to bed,
With a jumble of wonderful things in my head—

Moons and comets and meteorites,
Globes and circles and polar nights ;
And there I lay thinking,
And drowsily winking
At something—a ray—thro' my bed-curtains
Blinking ;

GREAT EXCITEMENT PREVAILS UPON THE EARTH.

Too bright for a star, and growing still brighter,
Making the moon-lighted chamber yet lighter,
Which very much astonished the writer !

A TALE OF A COMET.

I gazed from the casement,
And wondered, with ever-increasing amazement,
What the look of alarm on the Moon's frowning face meant.

A COMICAL CHAP.

For there was the Moon, and, strange to say,
There too was the Earth, just over the way,
Like the Doctor's globe, or a huge balloon,
Forty times larger, perhaps, than the Moon,
All covered with circles, and looming in space :
There were groups upon it, and every face
Was turned one way ; and very long-jointed Telescopes at the sky were pointed ; —
And there, with a terrible rushing and humming
And hissing of breath, was a Comet a-coming !

So long and so queer, and as it came nearer
It grew every moment longer and queerer !
Until I made out such a comical chap,
In a red-flannel coat with a very long flap,

His nose peering out from a very close cap,
His fingers in mittens, his chin in a wrap,
Like a tourist prepared for a very cold snap !

On, on he sped, through the regions of space,
With very short legs at a very long pace,
His well-filled knapsack lashed to his back,
Extra shoes and canteen strapped under his pack,
His coat-tails flying away on his track —
Entangled far off in the Pleiades,
On the horns of the Bull and Orion's knees.

On, on he came,
With nose like a flame,
So red I was sure the fellow'd been drinking
(His canteen was empty, I knew by the clinking) ;

"BLESS MY STARS ! HERE I AM !"

"And what can a sober Comet be thinking,"
I cried "not to see there, plain as the day,
The Earth, like a target, hung right in his way ?"

A TALE OF A COMET.

The groups were beginning to hurry about,
and hustle and bustle and signal and shout,
and the Moon looked scared, while I shrieked out,

THE COMET COMES OUT THE OTHER SIDE.

Dear sir, I beg pardon, I don't know your name — pray you'll consider, and if it's the same to you, here's a planet! I don't think you knew it;

But, sir, it will be

A great favor to me and a very large circle of friends, as you see,

you will drive round it instead of right thro' it!"

He put up his head with a stupefied stare,

And says he, "I declare!

No, I wasn't aware!

and I'm going at such a deuce of a rate —

stop if I could, but I fear it's too late!

Miss my stars! here I am!" He had just time to stoop,

when through it, head-foremost, he went at a swoop,

As a circus rider dives through a hoop!

With a crash,

And a smash,

And a roar as of thunder,

It quivered,

And shivered,

And flew asunder:

The Moon, looking down, shed tragical tears;

While, winking hard and holding his ears,

The Comet came out on the other side,

Wheeled round, swore loud, and ruefully eyed

The ruin; sneezed two or three times; then drew

His long tail after him down the blue.

"Heavens and earth! what have I done!

This does beat everything under the sun!

I don't care the wink of a star," said he,

"For all the damage done to me —"

THE COMET TRIES NEEDLE AND THREAD.

(Feeling his nose, and then with a flirt

Carefully brushing away the dirt

A TALE OF A COMET.

in his coat and its stained and draggled skirt) —
 t look at this dear little, queer little planet!
 done the business for her, and I van, it uite too bad! The fairest of creatures —

THE COMET TRIES HIS GLUE POT.

How well I remember her pleasant features,
 The smile on her face and the light in her eye,
 When I've touched my hat to her, hurrying by,
 Many a time, on my way through the sky!
 I'd mend the poor thing if I could — and I'll try!"

How he got it, or where,
 I cannot declare;

But thereupon he drew up a chair,
 Hung his long coat-tail over the back,
 Sat down by the pieces and opened his pack,
 Brought forth from its depths a stout needle and thread,

And there he sat squinting and scratching his head,
 As if rather doubtfully questioning whether
 'Twas wise to patch her together!

Meanwhile — but how can I hope to tell
 Half that to my friends befell
 On the shattered and scattered shell?
 How depict the huge surprise
 Of some, at the very astonishing rise
 Of their real estate, shot off in the skies?
 How describe the flying blocks,
 The fall of steeples and railroad stocks,
 The breaking of banks, and the stopping of clocks;
 And all the various knocks and shocks; —
 Frantic reporters rushing about,
 And correspondents sending out
 In a big balloon, intending from it
 To interview our friend, the Comet!
 While the wide-awake daily press unfurled
 Its rival bulletins: "END OF THE WORLD!!
 FRIGHTFUL COLLISION! AMERICA HIT!!!
 FULL PARTICULARS! CANADA HURLED

CHEERFULLY SEWING AND GLUING.

OVER NEW ENGLAND! THE UNION SPLIT!!!
 INTERRUPTION OF TRAVEL AND TRADE!
 THE COMET COMING TO OUR AID!"

A TALE OF A COMET.

For now the Comet — odd to see !
Although it didn't seem odd to me —
With thimble and glue-pot, sewing and gluing
The shattered globe, was cheerfully doing
All he could to restore the ruin ;
Patiently replacing all
The scattered fragments, great and small ;
Patching here and sticking there,
With a hopeful smile and a satisfied air,
Putting the planet into repair !
When all was done, with a dexterous twirl
Of his fingers, he set it once more a-whirl,
While the Moon looked pleased as a smiling girl.

Off he sped ; and the planet spun
Away on its axis round the sun ;
Then, watching with curious eyes, I found
He hadn't made it precisely round !
The zones, moreover, were strangely mixed :
Constantinople was squeezed betwixt
Petersburg and Baltimore ;
South Carolina and Labrador
Massachusetts were snugly tied ;
New York and Paris were side by side ;
And, oddest of all earthly fates,
Greenland was in the United States !

Greenland (he couldn't have made a greater Mistake) was on the new equator !
While in each crack of the crust some bit
Of broken China was made to fit.

Whereupon I cried, with a wild halloo,
“ Hold on ! come back ! this never will do !
Just see what a botch you've made ! ” Before
He had time to turn, with a clang and a roar,
And a glare of its one great Cyclops eye,
The Lightning Express went whizzing by

THE COMET GOES ON HIS WAY REJOICING.

With a rushing of steam,
And a howl and a scream,
That waked me from my curious dream ;
Which the Doctor avers (and he makes it plain)
Must all have passed through my busy brain
With the passing of the midnight train !

OH, HAPPY NIGHT!

By M. E. B.

O happy night! that brings the morn
To dawn above the Lord new born,
And bids the angels sing again
Their message to the sons of men—
We hail thee! we hail thee!

O happy manger! that hath known
This precious burden as thine own,
Beyond all gifts the world doth hold,
Of pomp and pow'r and gems and gold—
We hail thee! we hail thee!

O happy star! whose radiance sweet
Did lead the wise men's eager feet
To seek the way, unknown, untried,
That led them to the manger's side—
We hail thee! we hail thee!

O happy day! that gave to men
The Babe Divine of Bethlehem,
The King of Kings, the Undeiled,
In semblance of a little child—
We hail thee! we hail thee!

O happy Babe! whose wondrous eyes
Still hold the light of Paradise,
Look down in blessing from above
While Prince of Peace, and Lord of Love,
We hail thee! we hail thee!

WILLIE WEE.

BY MRS. A. M. DIAZ.

TWO lads were conversing as happy as kings,
Of the coming of Christmas and all that it brings,
The Christmas-tree and its many delights,
The city shop-windows and other fine sights,
Then out spake wee Will, sometimes called "Willie wee,"
Though often "sweet William," or "little Willee,"
Four years and a half or three-quarters was he—
"Say! What kind of a tree is a Chrissermus-tree?"
And the while they discoursed, as his wonder grew,
His questions like these he followed them through:
Does it have big branches that spread all around?
Do its roots stay deep down in the dark ground?
Does it grow, grow, grow, way up very high?
If you climb to the top will your head bump the sky?
Do any plums grow on it, or apples, or cherries?
Do any good nuts, or pretty red berries?
Does it bloom out all over with flowers white as snow,
And that tree does down there in our garden below?

Do robins and king-birds build nests in that tree?
And other birdies too?" asked little Willee.

Thus answered Ned, wise, school-boy Ned:

"A Christmas-tree, young curly-head,
Has branches, sure, but has no roots,
And on its branches grow no fruits;
Yet bright red apples there you'll see,
And oranges of high degree—
Apples and oranges on one tree!"

"That sounds very strange," quoth little Willee.

"No flowers bloom there, snowy white,
Yet with these fruits—a curious sight—
Are oft seen flowers both red and white!
Should you climb to the top without a fall,
Your head might bump against the wall,
But not against the sky, you see,
For indoors stands the Christmas-tree!"

"You tell very big stories," quoth little Willee.

"No birdie there doth build its nest,
No king-bird, blue-bird, robin redbreast,

"YOU TELL VERY BIG STORIES!" QUOTH LITTLE WILLEE.

Yet eggs thereon are often seen,
Of beautiful colors, pink, and green,
And purple, and lavender, fit for a queen.
Even eggs with pictures on them are found,
And with golden bands which circle around.
But from all these eggs so fair to see
Are hatched no birds in that Christmas-tree;

Instead, are hatched candy and gumdrops!" said he,
"Are you telling the truth?" asked little Willie.

"I've not told half, I do declare,
Of all those wondrous branches bear.
Bear? They bear dolls and whips and drums,
Tops, whistles, taffy, sugar-plums,

WILLIE WEE.

candy sheep, and candy cats,
candy birds, and candy rats,
India-rubber girls and boys,
trumpets and all kinds of toys,
books, and jumping-jacks, and mittens,
little cotton-flannel kittens;
over the whole of this Christmas-tree
dles are burning right merrily!
it think you of this? my sweet Willie-wee?"
hink you are fooling!" said little Willee.

t morning young Willie, with serious air, earth in a flower-pot, and buried up there eed of an apple with very great care.
ay, what are you doing, you rogue Willie-wee?"
um planting a seed for a Chrissermas-tree!
ot that good to do?" asked little Willee.
'here came from that seed a green little shoot
ch put out its leaves and firmly took root, so finely did thrive that at last it was found large for the house and was set in the ground, ere it grew up, a tree, one scarcely knew how.
k down by the wall; it is standing there now.
lossoms in springtime, and many a nest
; been built there by king-bird and robin redbreast;
l other birdies too oft come to the tree
l sing there and swing there, oh, so merrily;
y make it all summer our joy and delight;
l in fall of the year 'tis a beautiful sight en the clustering wealth of its apples is seen — ruby red apples all set in their green!

— And Willie? Yes, he grew up, too, young Willie-wee,
And went as a sailor-boy over the sea.
He sailed in a ship to some far distant shore;
A storm came — and — and — we saw him no more.
It was long, long ago that deep sorrow we bore!
The lads who were talking, as happy as kings,
Of the coming of Christmas and all that it brings,
Are fathers now, so stately and tall.
Their children play by the garden wall,
And swing on the boughs of the apple tree,
Or climb to the top, the world to see;
(Some have gone from the home the world to see!)
And when autumn comes, and leaves turn brown,
And the ripened fruits are shaken down,
And here and there, on the orchard ground,
The red and the golden are heaped around —
'Tis the children who gather that tree by the wall,
And the apples from off its boughs that fall,
With kindly care are stored away,
Sure to appear on Christmas Day
In platter or basket for all to admire,
Or hung on strings before the fire,
There to swing and sputter and roast,
While many an one of the merry host
Gives a tender thought to that first Willie-wee
Who went as a sailor-boy over the sea.
The youngest of all; a new Willie-wee,
— A curly-haired rogue, and our darling is he! —
Now claims for his own uncle Will's Christmas-tree,
"Because," says the child, "he was named for me!"

ON CHRIST-DAY NIGHT.

BY NORA PERRY.

DULCET SOUNDS.

STATELY mansion, bright and gay
With festal light, made darkness day
Far up and down the dusky street

That Christmas night, while hurrying feet
Sped swiftly by, nor scarce delayed
For all the dulcet sounds that strayed
In merry measures from within,
Where harp and flute and violin,

In soft accordance, wild and sweet,
Made music for the dancers' feet.
All silken-clad those feet that kept
That time and tune, or lightly stopt

From room to room, from stair to stair ;
All silken-clad ; while standing there
Shut from the summer warmth and cheer,
The silken perfumed atmosphere

Of wealth and ease, a little maid
With beating heart, yet unafraid,
Enchanted, watched the fairy scene
Between the curtains' parted screen.
The fierce north wind came sweeping past
And shook her with its wintry blast ;
The frosty pavement of the street
Chilled to the bone her ill-clad feet ;

Yet moment after moment fled
And there she stood, with lifted head,
Her eager eyes, as in a trance,
Fixed on the changes of the dance,

ON CHRIST-DAY NIGHT.

Her eager ears still drinking in
The strains of flute and violin ;
And still, as sped the moments past,
Colder and colder swept the blast.

But little heed had she, or care :
Her glance upon one vision fair,
One vision, one, beyond the rest —
A girl with roses on her breast,
And with a look upon her face,

The sweet girl-face of Heaven's own grace,
As through the dance she smiling led
Her youthful guests, with airy tread.

" Ah, would she smile on me like this
And would she give me kiss for kiss
If I could stand there at her side ? "
The wistful watcher softly cried.
Even as she spoke she closer crept,
Upon the broad low terrace stept,
And nearer leaned. — Just then, just there,
A street light sent a sudden glare

Across her face. — One startled glance,
And from the changes of the dance,
With beating heart and eyes dilate,
The girlish mistress of the fête
Sprang swiftly forth. — A moment more
And through the window's opened door
Another guest was ushered in.
Her lip was pale, her cheek was thin,

No costly robe of silk and lace
Apparelled her, and on her face
And in her dark bewildered eyes
A shock of fear and shamed surprise
Did wildly, desperately gleam,
While here and there, as in a dream,
She vaguely heard, yet did not hear,
The sound of voices far and near.

She tried to speak : some word she said
Of all her troubled doubt and dread,
Some childish word — “what would they do ? ”

Then all at once a voice rang through
Her troubled doubt, her troubled fear,
“What will they do, why, this — and this ! ”
And on her cold lips dropped a kiss,

A tender clasp. — She laughed and wept
And laughed again, for this and this,
This tender clasp, this tender kiss,
Was more than all her dream come true :
Was earth with Heaven’s light shining through ;
Was Christ’s own promise kept aright —
His word fulfilled on Christ-day night !

GRACIE'S FANCIES.

BY BRENDA AUBERT.

HIRR of wings, and a rush of feet!
And quick through the driving snow and sleet

of snow-birds, tiny and brown, gnarled old plum-tree settle down!

Grace, at the window, with wondering eyes
Watches their coming in shy surprise:

A moment she watches the chirping band,
Her sweet face resting upon her hand,

mamma, look! it is snowing brown,
as the birdlings flutter down.

Then cries — and a laugh slips out with the words —
“Why, mamma, the snow-flakes have turned to birds!”

WAITING A WINTER'S TALE.

BY MRS. SALLIE M. B. PIATT.

SOME sweet things go just to make room for others :

The blue field-blossom hurries from the dew,
(My little maiden, hush your noisy brothers !)
And see, the wild-rose reddens where it grew !

The green leaf fades that you may see the yellow ;
We have the honey when we miss the bee ;
Who wants the apples, scarlet-stained and mellow,
Must give the buds upon his orchard-tree ;

Then, for those finely painted birds that follow
The sun about and scent their songs with flowers,
We have, when frosts are sharp and rains beat hollow,
These pretty, gray crumb-gathering pets of ours ;

The butterflies (you could not catch) were brighter
Than anything that we have left in air ;

But these still-flying shapes of snow are whiter,
I fancy, than the very lilies were.

Then, is the glimmer of fire-flies, cold and eerie,
Far in the dusk, so pleasant after all
As is this home-lamp playing warm and cheery,
Among your shadow-pictures on the wall ?

But I forget. There ought to be a story,
A lovely story ! Who shall tell it, then ?
The boys want war — plumes, helmets, shields and glory —
They'd like a grand review of Homer's men.

Their jealous sisters say it's tiresome hearing
(A girl is not as patient as a boy,)
Of that old beauty — yes, the much-recurring,
About-three-thousand-years-old, Helen of Troy.

WAITING A WINTER'S TALE.

They'd rather hear some love-tale murmured faintly
Through music of the sleigh-bells: something true,
Such as their young grandmothers, shy and saintly,
Heard under stars of winter — told anew !

The little children, one and all, are crying
For just a few more fairies — but, you know
They go to sleep when golden-rod is dying,
And do not wake till there is no more snow.

They sleep who kept your Jersey cow from straying,
 My boy, while you were deep in books and grass :
 Who tended flowers, my girl, while you were playing
 Some double game, or wearing out your glass.

“ Ah, where are all the children? How I miss them !
 So many worlds-full are gone since I came !
 I long to take them to my heart and kiss them,
 And hear those still small voices laugh my name.

They sleep — but what sweet things they have been making,
 By golden moons, to give you a surprise —
 Beat slower, little hearts with wonder aching,
 Keep in the dark yet, all you eager eyes !

“ Some over whom no violet yet is growing ;
 Some under broken marble, ages old ;
 Some lie full fathom five where seas are flowing ;
 Some, among cliffs and chasms, died a-cold ;

The fairies sleep. But their high lord and master
 Keeps wide-awake, and watches every hearth ;
 Great waters freeze that he may travel faster —
He puts a girdle round about the earth !

“ Some through the long Wars of the Roses faded ;
 Some did walk barefoot to the Holy Land ;
 Some show young faces with the bride's-veil shaded ;
 Some touch me with the nun's all-gracious hand ;

Just now in the dim North, as he remembers
 His birthday back through centuries, he appears
 A trifle sad, and looks into the embers —
 Then shakes down from his cheek a shower of tears.

“ Some in the purple with crown-jewels burning,
 Some in the peasant's hodden-gray go by,
 Some in forlornest prisons darkly yearning
 For earth and grass, the dove's wing and the sky.

He thinks of little hands that reached out lightly
 To catch his beard and pull it with a will,
 Now round their buried rosebuds folded whitely,
 Forever and forever, oh, how still !

“ One sails to wake a world that has been lying Hid in its leaves, far in the lonesome West,
 In an enchanted sleep, with strange winds sighing
 Among the strange flowers in her dreaming breast.

WAITING A WINTER'S TALE.

And One — I held Him first — the immortal Stranger! “But — where’s my cloak? Is this a time for sorrow?”

I smell, to-night, the frankincense and myrrh;
I see the star-led wise men and the manger;
And his own Mother — I remember her!

... And where’s the story, do you ask of me?
To-morrow and to-morrow and to-morrow!
And shall you have it then? Why — we shall see!

CHRISTMAS.

BY MRS. L. C. WHITON.

MAMMA, what is Christmas?" How can I say?

I will try to answer you "true as true."

It is just the loveliest, lovely day,

That is steeped in rose-color all the way through!

When miniature toy-shops in stockings are found,

That are left in the chambers without a sound;

And papa gives gifts with a tender cheer;

And brother "hurrahs for the top of the year;"

And sister looks on with her wistful eyes,

With a soft, sweet smile at every surprise:

And Christmas means this:

A little child's bliss,

And the love of the dear Christ felt like a kiss.

And a piled-up glory is hard to express;

And "What is Christmas?" is wonder for all.

It is when the earth puts on holiday dress,

Made spotless fair with snowflakes that fall;

When hearts are lavish with treasures of love,

And the pale, pure stars shine brighter above;

And the dancing firelight seems to play

In the most mysterious, haunting way;

And the house fairies wander from sweet to sweet,

With an unexplored kingdom laid at their feet:

And Christmas means this:

A little child's bliss,

And the love of the dear Christ felt like a kiss.

And still "What is Christmas?" Darling, come here.

It is meant for the birthday, "true as true,"

Of a beautiful child that was born in Judea,

That His mother loved, as I love you;

That grew up to teach you how you should seek

To be in your spirit "lowly and meek,"

And onward higher and higher to go,

Till you changed to an angel, whiter than snow;

And offered freely (that all might take)

The gift of Himself for the whole world's sake!

And Christmas means this:

A little child's bliss,

And the love of the dear Christ felt like a kiss.

MIDSUMMER SONGS.

*And now, since all the little birds are singing
In bush and brake,
And all the honey flower bells dimly ringing,
And grasses shake —*

*And grasses shake before the reapers' coming,
While through and through
This sweetness locusts shrill and bees are humming,
I'll sing to you*

*A little song, with bird-notes all a-twitter,
With honey flowing
From tilted flower-cups with dew a-glitter,
With fire-flies glowing ;*

*And over it roses in knots, and myrtle,
As thickly lay
(And violets) as on a maiden's kirtle,
A holiday.*

*Sweetened all through with flowers, with which 'tis filled
So full, you see
It needs (and also honey round it spilled)
A sweet song be.*

"SAINT EMILY."

"SAINT EMILY."

BY E. F. FRYE.

WHEN grass grows green in spring-time
And trees are budding gay,
When the breath of bursting lilacs
Makes sweet the air of May,
When cowslips fringe the brooksides,
And violets gem the dells,
And tremble mid the grasses
The wind-flower's slender bells,
When the fragrant lily rises
From its sheltering sheath of green,
In the city's narrow alleys
Saint Emily is seen.
A modest little maiden,
She walks secure from harm;
A basket, flower-laden,
Swings lightly on her arm,
And right and left she scatters,
Alike to bad and good,
The beauties of the garden,
The treasures of the wood.

When summer days drag slowly,
In languor, heat, and pain,
To those who lie in hospital,
Never to rise again,
Dreaming, with fevered longing,
Of shady country homes,
Where roses hang in clusters,
And honeysuckle blooms,
From cot to cot so softly
Moves dear Saint Emily;
And here a rose she proffers,
And there a bud lays she.
The close abode of sickness
She fills with fragrant bloom;
Her gentle presence passes
Like music through the room;
And many a moaning sufferer
Hushes his sad complaint,
And follows with his weary eyes
The movements of this saint.

"NO BLUE SO SWEET AS THAT BABY'S EYES!"

BLUE AND GOLD.

BY MRS. CLARA DOTY BATES.

THE warm June day was full
Of color as it could hold ;
"Now, which is the sweetest blue,
And which is the brightest gold,
In all that your little eyes can see,
In cloud-land, earth, or the water-world ?"
I said to the children three.

We were on the fresh new grass,
And the pretty hammock hung
Like a web between the trees,
And in it the baby swung.
'Twas as if a spider, busy and sly,
Had spun its meshes there, white and light,
And caught a butterfly.

"SAINT EMILY."

When autumn paints the woodlands
With scarlet and with gold,
When the blue gentian's lids uncloze
In frosty meadows cold,
From the little troop of children
That crowd some Orphan Home
The joyous shout arises,
"Saint Emily has come!"
And round her close they gather,
An eager little band,
While from the well-stored basket
She fills each outstretched hand
With purple hillside asters,
And wondrous golden-rod,
And all the lingering flowers that love
To dress the autumn sod;
And pallid cheeks flush rosy,
And heavy eyes grow bright,
And little hearts forlorn and lone,
Stir with a deep delight.

And when the woods are naked,
And flowers no longer blow,
When the green nooks they love so well
Are buried in the snow,
Not quite unknown that presence
To children sick in bed,
Bearing bright wreaths of autumn leaves,
And strings of berries red.
A heaven-sent mission, surely,
To cheer the sick and poor
With bounties that the bounteous God
Has strewn beside our door —
To gladden little children,
To comfort dying hours,
To bear to wretched hearts and homes
The gospel of the flowers.
What marvel if glad blessings
Surround Saint Emily!
What marvel if some loving eyes
In her an angel see! —

And, too, what marvel if the thought
Is borne to me and thee,
That many a kindly boy and girl
As sweet a saint might be.

BLUE AND GOLD.

A moment's silence fell

On all, till Teddy guessed —

He had eyes for every bird,

And eyes, too, for its nest —

And he cried — the eager little soul —

“The bluest blue is the bluebird,

And gold is the oriole.”

Then Flora, who loved flowers,

But had not spoken yet,

Whispered that gold was a crocus,

And blue a violet.

And Edith, the more emphatic one,

Said : “ No ; the bluest blue is the sky,

And the goldenest gold the sun ! ”

I pointed to the web

That swung so white and light,

In which the baby cooed

As a nestling pigeon might ;

“ I can answer best of all,” I said,

“ For there is in water-world, earth or skies

No blue so sweet as that baby's eyes,

No gold so bright as his head ! ”

THE LAND OF USED-TO-BE.

BY JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

AND where's the Land of Used-to-be, does little baby wonder?
Oh, we will clap a magic saddle over papa's knee,
And ride away around the world, and in and out and under,
The whole of all the golden sunny summer-time, and see !

Leisurely and lazy-like we'll jostle on our journey,
And let the pony bathe his hooves and cool them in the dew,
As he sidles down the shady way, and lags along the ferny
And the green grassy edges of the lane we travel through.

And then we'll canter on to catch the bubble of the thistle,
As it bumps among the butterflies, and glimmers down the sun,
To leave us laughing, all content to hear the robin whistle,
Or guess what Katydid is saying little Katy's done.

And pausing here a minute, where we hear the squirrel chuckle
As he darts from out the underbrush and scampers up the tree,
We will gather buds and locust-blossoms, leaves and honeysuckle,
To wreath around our foreheads, riding into Used-to-be ;

THE LAND OF USED-TO-BE.

For here's the very rim of it that we go swinging over—

Don't you hear the fairy bugles, and the tinkle of the bells?
And see the baby bumble-bees that tumble in the clover,
And dangle from the tilted pinks and tipsy pimpernels ?

And don't you see the merry faces of the daffodillies,

And the jolly johnny-jump-ups, and the buttercups a-gee,
And the low, lolling ripples ring around the water-lilies,
All greeting us with laughter to the Land of Used-to-be ?

And here among the blossoms of the blooming vines and grasses,

With a haze forever hanging in a sky forever blue,
And with a breeze from over seas to kiss us as it passes,
We will romp around forever as 'the little fairies do ;

For all the elves of earth and air are swarming here together—

The prankish Puck, king Oberon, and queen Titania too ;
And dear old Mother Goose herself, as sunny as the weather,
Comes dancing down the dewy walks to welcome me and you !

A BABY SHOW.

By H. H.

A DROLL conversation I once overheard—
Two children, a cat, a cow, and a bird.
The names of the children were Eddie and Jane;
The names of the others I did not hear plain.
How came I to hear them? I think I won't tell:

You may guess, if you please; and if you guess well
You'll guess that I heard it as many a man hears,
With his fancy alone, and not with his ears.

The children were drawing, with caution and care,
Their sweet baby-sister, to give her the air,
In a dainty straw wagon with wheels of bright red,
And a top of white muslin which shaded her head.
She was only one year and a few months old;
Her eyes were bright blue and her hair was like gold;
She laughed all the time from morning till night,
Till Eddie and Jane were quite wild with delight.

Such a wonderful plaything never was known!
Like a real live dolly, and all for their own!
Two happier children could nowhere be found,
No, not if you travelled the whole world around.
They had drawn her this morning where daisies grew—
White daisies, all shining and dripping with dew;
Long wreaths of the daisies, and chains, they had made;
In the baby's lap these wreaths they had laid,

And were laughing to watch her fat little hands
Untwisting and twisting the stems and the strands.
Just then, of a sudden, a lark flew by
And sang at the top of his voice in the sky;
"Ho! ho! Mr. Lark," shouted Jane, "come down here!
We're not cruel children. You may come without fear.
We've something to show you. In all your life maybe
You'll never see anything sweet as our baby!"

A BABY SHOW.

an odd thing, now, for a lark to do — you won't think my story's untrue —
s is the thing that I saw and I heard :
ark flew right down, like a sociable bird,
n as they called him, and perched on a tree,
inked with his eye at the children and me,
ughed out, as much as a bird ever can,
cried, " Ha ! ha ! Little woman and man !

I be quite surprised and astonished, maybe,
r that I do not think much of your baby.
ut in the field here I've got in my nest,
ldled up snug 'neath my wife's warm breast,
tle babies — two sisters, two brothers — ll with bright eyes, as bright as their mother's ;
aby's at least ten times older than they,
y are all ready to fly to-day ;

'll take care of themselves in another week,
your poor baby can walk or can speak.
often surprised me to see what poor things
ies are that are born without wings ;
it one at a time ! Dear me, my wife be quite ashamed of so idle a life !"
ie lark looked as scornful as a lark knows how,
swung up and down on a slender bough.

A cat had been eying him there for a while,
And sprang at him now from top of a stile.
But she missed her aim — he was quite too high ;
And oh, how he laughed as he soared in the sky !
Then the cat scrambled up, disappointed and cross ;
She looked all about her, and felt at a loss
What next she should do. So she took up the thread
Of the lark's discourse, and ill-naturedly said :

"Yes, indeed, little master and miss, I declare,
It's enough to make any mother-cat stare
To see what a time you do make, to be sure,
Over one small creature, so helpless and poor
As your babies are ! Why, I've six of my own :
When they were two weeks old they could run alone ;
They're never afraid of dogs or of rats —
In a few weeks more they'll be full-grown cats ;

"Their fur is as fine and as soft as silk —
Two gray, and three black, and one white as new milk.
A fair fight for a mouse in my family
Is as pretty a sight as you'll ever see.
It is all very well to brag of your baby —
One of these years it will be something, maybe !"
And without even looking at the baby's face,
The cat walked away at a sleepy pace.

"Moo, Moo!" said a cow, coming up. "Moo, Moo!

Young people, you're making a great to-do
About your baby. And the lark and the cat, They're nothing but braggers—I wouldn't give that,"

"HA! HA! LITTLE WOMAN AND MAN!"

A BABY SHOW.

d the cow snapped her tail as you'd snap your thumb)
r all the babies, and kittens, and birds, that come he course of a year! It does make me laugh look at them all, by the side of a calf!

hy, my little Brindle as soon as 'twas born od up on its legs, and sniffed at the corn;
ore it had been in the world an hour
egan to gambol, and canter, and scour over the fields. See its great shining eyes, l its comely red hair that so glossy lies l thick! he has never felt cold in his life;
the wind cuts your baby's skin like a knife.

oor shivering things! I have pitied them oft, muffled and smothered in flannel soft.
! ha! I am sure the stupidest gaby see that a calf's ahead of a baby!"

l the cow called her calf, and tossed up her head
e a person quite sure of all she has said.
n Jane looked at Eddy, and Eddy at Jane;
l Eddy, "How mean! I declare, they're too vain

"To live — preposterous things! They don't know What they're talking about! I'd like them to show
A bird, or a kitten, or a learned calf,
That can kiss like our baby, or smile, or laugh!"
"Yes, indeed, so should I!" said Jane in a rage;
"The poor little thing! She's advanced for her age,
For the minister said so the other day —
She's worth a hundred kittens or calves to play.

"And as for young birds — they're pitiful things!
I saw a whole nest once, all mouths and bare wings,
And they looked as if they'd been picked by the cook
To broil for breakfast. I'm sure that they shook
With cold if their mother got off for a minute —
I'm glad we have flannel, and wrap babies in it!"
So the children went grumbling one to the other,
And when they reached home they told their mother.

The dear baby, asleep, in its crib she laid,
And laughed as she kissed the children, and said:
"Do you think I believe that the sun can shine
On a boy or a girl half so sweet as mine?
The lark, and the cat, and the cow were all right —
Each baby seems best in its own mother's sight!"

THE WORLD WE KNOW IS A BRIGHT WORLD STILL,
BUT AH, FOR THE OTHER BEHIND THE HILL!

A YOUNG INQUIRER.

BY CHARLOTTE MELLEN PACKARD.

HOW does life look behind the Hill?
The earth spins round, the mountain is still,
Men and women they come and they go,
Children play in the valley below,
Winds are roaring, or winds are whist,
Sunbeams pass, there is rain and mist,
The world we know is a bright world still,
But ah, for the other behind the Hill!

A YOUNG INQUIRER.

suns I have ever seen from over a mountain screen, ed a finger of rosy light
h some crevice to paint "Good-night ;" darkness the great round moon
by like a red balloon, nd glittered awhile, until
to the people behind the Hill.

are calling me day by day —
and wonder whatever they say !
leys are pleasant, and days are long ay and study, with work and song —

But a boy keeps planning for other things,
There's room in his restless body for wings,
And fancy will never fold them until
He sees for himself what is over the Hill.

But most I dream of the unknown sea
Where brave ships hasten like birds set free,
Where plunging breakers ride high and loud
Till the sailor is lost between wave and cloud.
Oh the sunny lands, and the frozen zone,
The forests where never a man is known !
There are wonders and wonders waiting still
For a boy who has never looked over the Hill !

SILENCE OF THE MORNING'S SPLENDOR.

IN MIDSUMMER.

BY MRS. L. C. WHITON.

INTO silence of the morning's splendor
There is shaken a golden robin's dream;
Kissed by sunshine to divine surrender,
Bloom the snowy lilies in the stream;
Soft south winds the hidden wild flowers woo;
And between the tangled leaves in view —
Hush! I see the Summer,
Summer, Summer floating through.

Climbs the sun, with ecstasy of shining,
From the blush of rising into gold;
And the river's heart, with close defining,
Tells the same sweet story it is told;
Hills are veiled in tender mists anew;
From the liquid skies' unshadowed blue —
Hush! I see the Summer,
Summer, Summer flooding through.

A MIDSUMMER SONG.

BY MARY E. WILKINS.

I want to sing a little song to please you,
How midsummer comes following after June,
shall I pitch it by the lark or robin? —
The songs in midsummer should be in tune.

shall I give it sweetness like the roses? —
For midsummer has roses, as you know,
as full as June; and sprinkled 'o'er with spices
From beds of pinks and poppies in a row?

Flowers like them; or, maybe 'twould be sweeter,
Your little song, and prettier sound to you,
should make it make you think of lilies —
For midsummer has always lilies too.

And the meadow-sweet the bees they cluster thick the children pick it not for fear —

Like meadow-sweet and bees, if I could make it,
A pretty little song 'twould be to hear!

Down in the field a crowd of flowers are standing;
The locusts pipe, the flowers keep sweet and still —
With honey-balls of clover and the others,
If only I my little song could fill!

I want to sing a little song to please you
Of midsummer that's following after June,
But oh! of all her sweet, gay things, I cannot
With one put yet my little song in tune!

I think you'll have to find a child or robin,
Some ignorant and merry-hearted thing;
For, I suppose, a song of the midsummer
It takes a heart more like a bird's to sing!

AROUND THE MEADOW-SWEET. THE BEES THEY CLUSTER.

IN THE BLACK FOREST.

BY CELIA THAXTER.

UP through the great Black Forest,
So wild and wonderful,
We climbed in the autumn afternoon
'Mid the shadows deep and cool.

We climbed to the Grand Duke's castle
That stood on the airy height ;
Above the leagues of pine-trees dark
It shone in the yellow light.

We saw how the peasant women
Were toiling along the way,
In the open spaces, here and there,
That steeped in the sunshine lay.

They gathered the autumn harvest —
All toil-worn and weather-browned ;
They gathered the roots they had planted in spring,
And piled them up on the ground.

We heard the laughter of children,
And merrily down the road

Ran little Max with a rattling cart,
Heaped with a heavy load.

Upon orange carrots, and beets so red,
And turnips smooth and white,
With leaves of green all packed between,
Sat the little Rosel bright.

Around the edge of her wee white cap
The wind blew out her curls —
A sweeter face I have never seen
Than this happy little girl's.

A spray of the carrot's foliage fine,
Soft as a feather of green,
Drooped over her head from behind her ear
As proud as the plume of a queen.

Light was his burden to merry Max,
With Rosel perched above,
And he gazed at her on that humble throne
With the eyes of pride and love.

With joyful laughter they passed us by,
And up through the forest of pine,
So solemn and still, we made our way
To the castle of Eberstein.

Oh, lofty the Grand Duke's castle
That looked o'er the forest gloom ;
But better I love to remember
The children's rosy bloom.

LIGHT WAS HIS BURDEN TO MERRY MAX.

Oh, vast and dim and beautiful
Were the dark woods' shadowy aisles,
And all their silent depths seemed lit
With the children's golden smiles.

And sweet is the picture I brought away
From the wild Black Forest shade,
Of proud and happy and merry Max,
And Rosel, the little maid.

EDITH'S LESSON.

BY MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

OUT in the meadow the scented breeze
Was full of the gossip of birds and bees ;
In the orchard the glad things flew,
O'er meadow and orchard the sky was blue —
Sky was blue, and the clouds were white,
The summer morning was blithe and bright.

Quite too lovely in-doors to stay,"
Edith, "whether I work or play."
Ate and pencil and fairy-book
Carried forth to a cozy nook,
Where the shadows glanced, and the sunbeams shone,
The dear little girl could be alone.

There were hard examples that must be done,
Rather to see ere the set of sun ;
There was the merriest tale to read,
Lady fair, on a milk-white steed,—
Lady fair, and a stately lover,
The charm that lay in a four-leaf clover.

"Study the lesson!" the robin said,
As he poised on the branch above her head,
With a whirr of wings like the beat of drums ;
"Edith," the bee hummed, "mind the sums!"
But shadow and shine in their airy play
Coaxed for the story that matched the day.

"Any time will do for the tiresome task,"
Said Edith at last, "and I think I'll ask
Papa to excuse my Arithmetic, —
In such warm weather I might be sick
If I taxed this poor little brain of mine."
So she listened, you see, to shadow and shine ;

And then full-length on the velvet grass,
She dreamed of delights that would come to pass
When she, too large for the rigid rule
Of the happy home, or the stricter school,
Should be a woman, and quite at ease
Each hour to do what she might please.

A DREAMER.

"On silvery paper, with golden pen,"
 She mused, "I'd write love-stories then,
 And wherever I went, would people say,
 'The gifted Edith is here to-day !'
 And maybe,— for stranger things have been,—
 I might Editor be of a Magazine !"

No higher flight could her fancy take,
 Were the darling child asleep or awake ;
 And presently there in that paradise,

The lids fell over the heavy eyes,
 And the noon-bell's summons, loud and clear,
 Was heeded not by her slumbering ear.

How long was her nap, I do not know,
 But she sauntered home when the sun was low ;
 Dinner was over, and father frowned,
 And chided her gently for "idling round,"
 While gravely he bade her be sure and see
 That she solved her examples after tea.

DORRIS' SPINNING.

(An Old Time Ballad.)

BY MARGARET J. PRESTON.

SHE sat in the upper chamber
— 'Twas a summer of Long Ago —
And looked through the gable window
At the river that ran below,
And over the quiet pastures,
And up at the wide blue sky,
And envied the jay his freedom
As he lazily flitted by.

Yet patiently at her spinning,
In a halo of happy light,
She wrought, though a shimmer rippled
The heads of the wheat in sight —
Though the garden was spilling over
Its cups on the fragrant air,
And the hollyhocks at the doorway
Had never looked half so fair.

She saw, as her wheel kept whirling,
The leisure of Nature too —
The beautiful holiday weather
Left nothing for her to do:
The cattle were idly grazing,
And even the frisky sheep,
Away in the distant meadows,
Lay under the shade asleep.

So sitting, she heard sweet laughter,
And a bevy of maidens fair,
With babble of merry voices,
Came climbing the chamber stair;
"O Dorris! how can you bear it,
To drone at your spinning here?
Why, girl! it's the heart of summer,
The goldenest time of year!

SO SHE MINDED HER WHEEL, AND BLITHELY
SHE SANG AS SHE TWIRLED IT ROUND.

DORRIS' SPINNING.

"Put out of your hand the distaff,
This wearisome whirl relax —
'There are things that are gay, Dorris,
Than sitting and spinning flax:
Come with us away to the forest;
When it rains is the time to ply
Such tiresome tasks — and to-day is
The fifteenth day of July!"

With a face that was softly saddened,
Sweet Dorris looked up and said,
As she unravelled a bit of tangle,
And twisted again her thread,
"Nay, nay, I must do my spinning;
It wouldn't be kind or right
That the loom should be kept a waiting;
My hanks must be done to night.

"Aye, surely, the day is lovely!
It tugs at my very heart
To look at its dunting beauty,
Nor share in its joy my part:
I may not go forth to meet it,
But the summer is kind, you see,
And I think, as I sit at my spinning—
I think it will come to me!"

So the frolicsome maidens left her,
With something of mild surprise
That Dorris should choose a duty,
With pleasure before her eyes;
Not dreaming that when her mother
Her "dozens" should count up-stairs,
And kiss her and say, "My darling!"
Her day would be glad as theirs.

So she minded her wheel, and blithely
She sang as she twirled it round,
And cunningly from her fingers
The delicate fibre wound;
And on through the sunny hours,
That neither were sad nor long,
She toiled in her sweet obedience,
And lightened her toil with song.

(She sings.) "Come hither, happy birds,
With warbling woo me,
Till songs that have no words
Melt through and through me!
Come, bees, that drop and rise
Within the clover,
Where yellow butterflies
Go glancing over."

And lilies, shining
Like gilded goblets bright
With silver lining—
Each to my window send Gifts worth the winning,
To cheer me as I bend
Above my spinning!

“Oh, ripples on the sand,
That break in beauty,
Oh, pines, that stiffly stand
Like guards on duty,

Green meadows, where, this morn,

THE BROOK BEHIND THE WAUMBEC HOUSE.

(Jefferson and White Mountains.)

BY MRS. MARTHA PERRY LOWE.

R UN along thy pastures, happy, happy brook,
Run along the pebbles, with a curvet and a crook,

Sing it all the morning, and sing it afternoon,
Sing it all the starry night — that pleasant little tune !

Are you growing modest, do you think that I shall tire ?

Do you fear that I shall go and look for something higher ?

Well I know the noisy world has music grand enough,
But I do not care for all its preludes, wild and rough.

Well I know other music, solemn and sublime, Voices of the ocean sounding all the depths of time :

That is not the music I am looking for to-day,
It is you I want to hear, so frolicsome and gay.

Do not ever try to practise any modern art,
Do not even stop to think or care about your part,
Sing just as you always do, when there are none to hear,

That will surely be the sweetest way to please my ear.

Ah, my little brook ! how foolish was my thought :
All the praises of the worldling can disturb you naught.

Nothing can mislead you, or set you ill at ease,
Make you think about yourself, or of the way to please.

Not a little fish could have made such a speech,
Not a shining fly that skims along your beach,
Not a little bird would have said such a thing—
Pardon me my foolishness, and sing again, sing !

THREE.

BY ROSA GRAHAM

ONE, two, three !
One was Bobby Lee
Sitting by the brook,
With his fishing-hook,
With his spelling-book
Thrust far aside,
Whilst loud he cried :
“ For once, no school,
For once, no rule,
Bell, ring away !
This whole, whole day
I'll stop and play ! ”

One, two, three !
One was Mrs. Bee
Stopping just to stare
At the vision there —
Bobby by the brook
With his fishing-hook ;
At the spelling-book
Thrust far aside ,

Whilst loud she cried :
“ The livelong day
A boy to play !
I'd like to see
One little bee
Like Bobby Lee ! ”

One, two, three !
One was Lady Rose,
In her pretty clothes,
Staring down to see
Little Bobby Lee,
With his fishing-hook,
With his spelling-book
Thrust far aside,
Whilst loud she cried :
“ The livelong day,
A boy to play !
I'd like to know,
If I did so,
How I would grow ! ”

"FOR ONCE, NO SCHOOL!"

SUMMER'S GOING.

BY MRS. L. C. WHITON.

LEAVES are shrinking on the trees,
Where the nests are hidden ;
There's a hush among the bees,
As to roam forbidden ;
There's the silk of corn that shows
Faded tangles blowing :
So that everybody knows,
Darling, summer's going.

There are insects' wings that gleam ;
Locusts shrilly calling ;
There are silences that seem
Into sadness falling ;
There is not another rose
But the sweet-brier blowing :
So that everybody knows,
Darling, summer's going.

There's the mist that haunts the night
Into morning sailing,
Leaving filmy webs of light
On the grasses trailing ;
There's the fierce red sun that glows,
Through the vapor showing :
So that everybody knows,
Darling, summer's going.

Breathe but softest little sigh,
Child, for vanished roses,
For each season, going by,
Something sweet discloses ;
And if in your heart has grown
Truth to fairer blowing,
Summer then will be your own,
Spite of summer's going.
